The growth and popularity of factor investing increases the potential for strategy crowding. If a factor strategy does become too crowded, there is a risk of a liquidity or drawdown event when the positioning changes. The first generation MSCI Factor Crowding Model can help active managers analyze their investments compared to the industry as a whole and help make better factor investing decisions.

KEY BENEFITS
- Enable timely decision-making on positioning in potentially crowded factors
- An easy to interpret dashboard to quickly view what is and isn’t crowded
- Leverages MSCI Barra’s latest generation of factor models
- The model is now available for the US equity market and coming soon for the global market

USE CASES
- Determine where factor crowding/drawdown risks may be growing, or what is out of favor
- Monitor susceptibility of portfolio to crowding risk
- Alert to potential bubbles and provide insight into when they may not exist
- Ride the crowding “wave”

MSCI FACTOR CROWDING SUMMARY
If too many investors are chasing the same strategies or factors, crowding will be evident in various ways. MSCI Factor crowding uses these metrics to provide one easy to interpret integrated measure with transparency to these drivers.

VALUATIONS:
Prices Bid Up

PAIRWISE CORRELATION & VOLATILITY:
Stocks of a Factor moving together with wider swings

FACTOR REVERSAL:
Strong recent performance promotes performance-chasing

SHORT INTEREST SPREAD:
Bottom quintile heavily shorted relative to top
The MSCI Factor Crowding Model allows investors to examine Factor Crowding over time using multiple dimensions providing further insight into risk and return drivers.

The MSCI Factor Crowding Model can also order Factors by crowding scores at any point in time, enabling investors to make decisions on potentially crowded factors.
